Biography

Dr. Strasser teaches statistics, supply chain management and operations to undergraduates and to students in the MBA program. Her research interests, including supply chain management and innovative teaching, have resulted in numerous publications. Currently Dr. Strasser is experimenting with telecommunications software to offer her students the option of taking her courses in the classroom or offsite.

This format is in real time but also allows for recordings of the sessions to be viewed at a later time by students who miss classes or want to review. Dr. Strasser also offers her services as a consultant for several businesses in the community.
