

INDIVIDUALIZED MAJOR

The College of Arts and Sciences offers an Individualized major of study which gives students the opportunity to propose a unique degree program suited to their individual interests and goals. With an Individualized major you can create a program of study aimed at preparing you for a specific kind of career that also brings together your academic interests from various departments. This major is intended for students with clearly defined academic or career objectives who feel that their special needs are not met by the departmental major option nor by the interdisciplinary program option. The selection of courses for the Individualized major should reflect serious deliberation on the part of the student and advisor. As an Exploratory student, you can discuss this option with your advisor who can provide guidance to help you decide if an Individualized major is right for you and help you take the necessary steps to propose a plan for approval from the Dean's office.
