

Assistant Professor, Medieval Literature and Professional/Technical Writing

The Department of English at Valparaiso University seeks a specialist in medieval literature with a secondary area in professional and technical writing. Courses include an upper-division survey of medieval English literature, occasional topics courses and seminars, courses in general education in humanities, and courses in technical and business communication, science and medical writing, computers and writing, and/or visual rhetoric. We especially welcome candidates who come from historically underrepresented groups and bring issues of diversity to their scholarship and teaching. The position is tenure track, to begin August 2016. Ph.D. required.

Candidates should be interested in working at a university engaged in issues in Christian higher education in the Lutheran tradition. Successful applicants will demonstrate a commitment to cultural diversity and the ability to work with individuals or groups from diverse backgrounds. In addition to strong academic qualifications and excellence in teaching, the University highly values experience in working across cultural and other significant differences.

Teaching load is normally three courses per semester and includes graduate, upper-division, and general education. Traditional service functions, such as advising and committee work, are expected. Publications are necessary for advancement. Salary competitive.

Submit a letter of application, CV, and three letters of recommendation electronically at <http://apply.interfolio.com/31972>. CV and letters must be received by Nov. 2 and will be acknowledged. We will request writing samples from candidates we wish to consider further. For questions about the department or university, please contact Professor Elizabeth Burow-Flak, Chair, Department of English, Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, IN 46383. (Betsy.BurowFlak@valpo.edu).

Preliminary interviews will be conducted at the MLA convention in Austin prior to invitations for campus visits.

Employment at Valparaiso University will require a satisfactory criminal background check.
