

Lecturer in Meteorology
Department of Geography and Meteorology

The Department of Geography and Meteorology at Valparaiso University announces a position at the rank of lecturer available beginning March 16, 2015. Candidates must have a strong background and interest in teaching courses in areas that may include aviation meteorology, general meteorology, atmospheric dynamics, physical meteorology, instrumentation, satellite meteorology, or numerical modeling. Duties will include a work-load of 12 credits per semester of teaching and management of the Meteorology instrumentation suite, including the simultaneous dual-polarization Doppler radar. Applicants should possess at the minimum an M.S. in meteorology or atmospheric science and a strong desire and ability to excel in undergraduate teaching and advising in a large, dynamic program. Those with broad backgrounds, interdisciplinary skills, and laboratory computer applications training are especially encouraged to apply. Knowledge of Linux, Python, GEMPAK, BUFKIT, and other meteorological software applications is desirable.

We are looking for excellent teachers first and foremost. Additional information concerning the department, its people, and facilities can be found at <http://www.valpo.edu/geomet/>. Please submit a letter of application, résumé, and contact information for two references to Interfolio at <http://apply.interfolio.com/28488>. Review of applications will begin immediately and will close on February 9, 2015.

Successful applicants will demonstrate a commitment to cultural diversity and the ability to work with individuals or groups from diverse backgrounds. In addition to strong academic qualifications and excellence in teaching, the University highly values experience in working across cultural and other significant differences. Candidates should be interested in working at a university engaged in issues in Christian higher education in the Lutheran tradition. Applications from women and minorities are encouraged.
