A word from the director:

The entire freshman class of Christ College has been involved in the conception, development, and production of Now, On The Other Hand... This venture into Theater-In-Education is an aspect of their regular academic work and forms a part of the course, Problems of Inquiry. An original theatrical presentation was selected as the method whereby the creative dimension of Inquiry can be shown to be a part of the total range of investigation. Since the general focus of the first part of the course was on values, the theme of the production has turned out to be: What is the value of human life? The process of developing a dramatic presentation centering on this question--working with ideas, techniques, and performance values--has been the important pedagogical element of this project.
