About the production--this production is designed to investigate what happiness means to various people. Is happiness a materialistic or spiritual quality? It is something that all of us must decide for ourselves. We hope that this production enables you to continue looking for your own happiness in the right way.

From the directors--the fall production of the freshman class of Christ College has become an important event in the life of the College--and indeed, the University--during the past seven years. "What will they come up with this time?" is the question usually asked. The production is conceived, written, acted, and produced by members of the class--everyone is involved inasmuch as the production is a part of the academic course, "The Arts of Inquiry." The creative and presentational aspect of the course is manifest on one level via the medium of theatre. The basis for the theme each year, as well as the style of production, is found in the texts and problems

The creative and presentational aspect of the course is manifest on one level via the medium of theatre. The basis for the theme each year, as well as the style of production, is found in the texts and problems investigated and studied in the more-or-less traditional classroom manner. This concept of theatre-in-education is an important part of the experimental nature of Christ College. We have always found it an exhilarating and amazing experience to see what develops and to share the process of discovery and presentation. We hope some of the same experience will be yours tonight.
