Cleaning Up Our Acts

Director of CC Freshman Drama Workshop:

John Steven Paul, PhD

Technical Director:

Devin Porter

Stage Managers:

Ty Doering, Amanda Spangler, Susan Van Dyke

Dear Friend,

The musical you're about to enjoy is the product of teamwork and cooperation. It is the product of people with differing ideas working together creatively to form a single production. The ideology that our creative committee used was much different than that of the two main characters, Paul and Tia, in Cleaning Up Our Acts. The idea of working together is a foreign concept to both of them. Ultimately, the consequences of Paul and Tia's actions lead to a deep sense of regret about their past. This theme has held true in many of the Christ College readings this semester; especially Antigone. In Sophocles' tragedy, the outcome of events could have been drastically changed through cooperation and a deeper sense of understanding for the actions of one another.

Many of our other readings have focused on what the "good life" is and what leads toward the "good life." We all seek to lead a "good life," and the process of making this production has taught us that cleaning up our acts is a key step to success. It's been a long and tiring journey, but a good one. So now, as the house lights fade and the first scene commences, sit back and enjoy our complex, thought-provoking, purposeful musical about life, loss, and cleansing agents.

In Christ,

Matt Olin

Chair -- Creative Committee
