Pronoun Order

When using pronouns to replace part of a sentence, you may need to use more than one pronoun at a time. For example:

> Elle explique l'incident aux policiers.

Replace the word l'incident with the direct object pronoun le and the phrase aux policiers with the indirect object pronoun leur.

> Elle le leur explique.

The question is, in what order do they go in the sentence since you have more than one pronoun? First, remember that these pronouns go before the verb, and if it's a negative, the first part of the negation 'ne' goes before any of the pronouns, and the 'pas' comes after the verb.

> Elle ne le leur explique pas.

To memorize the order of pronouns, find a simple tune that you can sing or hum to match this order:

me • te • se • nous • vous before
le • la • les before lui • leur before
y • en

Singing them to a tune can help you remember the order when you have multiple pronouns used in regular affirmative sentences, negatives verb sentences, and negative imperative sentences.
