Phi Beta Kappa, founded in 1776 at the University of William and Mary in Virginia, is America's most prestigious academic honor society. It recognizes excellence in the liberal arts and sciences and champions freedom of thought. Each year Valparaiso University inducts seniors and some juniors who have shown academic excellence in the breadth and depth of their studies in the liberal arts and sciences, as well as, on occasion, select alumni who have demonstrated values consonant with liberal education in their work and lives. Valparaiso University has sheltered a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa since 2004.
